I trust this message reaches you well and in good spirits. It is with profound gratitude that I convey some of the recent events and advancements at Rainbow Children Home Nepal. Despite the challenges brought forth by the ongoing recession post-COVID, and the widespread economic repercussions affecting lives worldwide, we remain committed to our mission of providing support and care to the children under our care.

Over the past few months, our home has been brimming with the spirit of festivity, togetherness as well as had various empowering training like Public Speech and recently had a Public Speech Competition in Children's day. The myriad of festivals, including Teej, Mother's Day, Ashar 15. various programs like dental check-ups, visitors' birthdays, and more have not only added color and vibrancy to our lives but have also brought our children closer, fostering a sense of unity and cultural understanding. And we're already seeing them improving their stage fear and developing confidence.

During these celebrations, the resounding laughter of our children filled the air as they engaged in games, melodious songs, and exuberant dances. Witnessing their joyful smiles and the bonds they formed with each other was truly heartwarming.

As we reflect on these wonderful experiences, it's imperative to acknowledge the pivotal role played by our supporters and donors. Your generosity has been the cornerstone of our ability to provide a nurturing haven for our children to flourish. We remain profoundly thankful for your unwavering support, as it empowers us to continue offering quality education, healthcare, and essential life skills. Many of the earlier children are now abroad and approaching their career after their education or training. I'm absolutely delighted to see that they now are at different parts of the world where I never been.

Looking ahead, our commitment to enhancing our facilities and programs remains resolute, and your involvement remains integral in realizing these goals. On behalf of the entire Rainbow Children Home Nepal family, I extend my sincere gratitude to all our well-wishers and supporters. ASHAR 15

Reviving Traditions through the Ropai Rice Planting Festival

Likewise, rice holds the status of being the staple food in Nepali families, so rice farming has been a keystone of agriculture practices for centuries. In occasion of Ashar 15, a significant date in the Nepali agricultural calendar, Rainbow Children Home Nepal orchestrated a joyous event. Our children, filled with enthusiasm, eagerly participated in the traditional practice of "ropai," or rice planting.

During that instance

Journeying to the fields in Pame, the children engaged in the hands-on process of planting rice on the designated lands. This experience proved to be a remarkable and educational moment for our young ones, fostering a deep connection to the country's agricultural heritage. The event not only provided them with a chance to partake in a time-honored tradition but also offered a valuable lesson about the importance of agriculture in Nepali culture.

RAKSHA BANDHAN

Celebrating Raksha Bandhan with Joy and Unity at Rainbow Children Home

On the joyous occasion of Raksha Bandhan, the halls of Rainbow Children Home resonate with laughter, love, and a sense of togetherness. Sagar Gautam, as guiding presence in the lives of these children, steps into the role of a protector as he delicately ties rakhis around the wrists of each child. With every rakhi he places, he imparts not just a physical thread but a heartfelt blessing, symbolizing his unwavering support and care for their well-being. In this celebration of sibling bonds, the sisters of the home also partake enthusiastically, tying rakhis onto their brothers' wrists.

Throughout that situation

The children's faces light up with sheer happiness as the day unfolds. Their excitement is palpable as they share this tradition, and the air is filled with a sense of anticipation and joy.
